Recasting Sovereignty: France in a Globalized World

Globalization by its very nature erodes national sovereignty. This process represents a particular challenge for France with its proud history of independence. In this lecture, Hubert Védrine, the author of a report commissioned by President Nicolas Sarkozy on the subject in July 2007, explored how France has managed to maintain its sovereignty and its influence in the midst of globalization.

Revisionist History

By Howard Kurtz

Was Iran a rerun of Iraq, minus the invasion? Did the president hype the intelligence as he warned darkly of confronting Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to stave off World War III? Did the media fall down on the job again?
